Thirty-Third Sunday of Ordinary Time 15th November 2020

It is not as if you live in the dark for that Day to overtake you like a thief

The Parable of the Talents is very familiar, as is its message about the need to develop our gifts and use our talents well. It is a principle that can be argued for even from secular principles (as does the philosopher, Immanuel Kant).

The version of it in St Matthew's Gospel, however, has a particular edge. It sits between the parable of the wise and foolish attendants (last week's Gospel) and the last judgement (next week's). It has some puzzling lines that seem unfair - such as the apparently unfair treatment of those who have least. At its core is a reminder of our personal responsibility and the reality of judgement - that we will be held to account. The second reading further underscores that reality - they know about the Day of the Lord and shouldn't get lazy or complacent.

The key to understanding the action of the man with the one talent is that one could not be held liable for the loss of something that was buried. He had resigned his responsibility for something that the Master had chosen for him, appropriate to his abilities. I can't help feeling that the Master would have been happier if the man had at least made an effort which hadn't worked rather than simply resigned. Perhaps if the master's return was more on his mind, he might have been more active. (For me, even if it doesn't look like it, I do tend to make more of an effort to tidy the place up if I am expecting a visitor, and I'm sure I am not the only one!)

We need an appreciation of judgement as part of our spiritual lives. It gives urgency to our life in Christ. We do not know the day or the hour when the Lord will come, nor when we might die and come before him in judgement. And when we stand before him face to face what will we have, and what more might we have brought? What have we done with that most valuable gift of faith? Have we fanned it into a blazing fire by the sacraments, prayer and charity, or neglected it so that it flickers precariously? How much better might we have been stewards of the goods of the earth? How did we care for our common home? How much more might we have sought out the lost or comforted the afflicted?

This annual reminder of the reality of judgement is an urgent summons to responsibility and the concrete actions that flow from it.

The message of the Last Judgement calls men to conversion while God is still giving them 'the acceptable time... the day of salvation.' It inspires a holy fear of God and commits them to the justice of the kingdom of God. It proclaims the 'blessed hope' of the Lord's return, when he will come 'to be glorified in the saints, and to be marvelled at in all who have believed'.
