

Merry Christmas

It is a cool and refreshing day here in Minnesota. We had our family celebration last Friday. Kara, Ryan and the three grandkids are heading back to Colorado Springs tomorrow. Talitha and Rob had one canceled flight because of bad weather but have now returned to their little nest in Colorado.

Like all of us, this has been an interesting year. Not sure what words would best describe it.

I was reminded that many "fact finder" people have tried their best to prove someone's thoughts and comments these days. We are so blessed to have in our lives and hand the main fact-finding book, "the Word of God". God has proved Himself many times this year! He is so Faithful!

We know you would rather see the Johnson family in photos. We haven't changed much but our grand kids have begun to sprout up and can carry on a good conversation. We are blessed!

Good thing we all fit in a narrow place. We hope and pray your families were able to get together this Christmas.

God bless each one of you and we pray this New Year will once again be a testimony of God faithfulness. Keep looking up, Our Lord's return is not far off!
