“For what can be know about God is plain to them, because God has shown it to them. For His invisible attributes, namely, His eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly perceived, ever since the creation of the world, in the things that have been made. So they are without excuse.”

—Romans 1:19-20

A young, engaged man was sent to Ireland on business. His worried fiancée, concerned about him being around beautiful Irish lasses, sent him a harmonica to take his mind off the local girls. Upon returning after a year, he ran up to her to give her a big hug and kiss. Holding up both arms she said, “wait just a minute! Let me hear you play the harmonica!”

The evidence you find in Scripture about who Jesus is and how He proved his claim with all the miracles he did was unlike anything anyone had ever seen. Huge crowds of people flocking to him because of those healings and other miracles. Seeing that happen or being one of those he healed would be evidence enough for you, and if that were you there would be no way you would have been convinced otherwise who Jesus is.

Great for them, they were physically there, but that was a long time ago, right?

But how do you know George Washington was our first president? Or pick any moment in history from then to last week even. How can you be certain that event happened the way you understand it or were taught it in school?

Evidence is great but we as human beings are predisposed to having and escapism mentality if what evidence were exposed to is taking us to a place we do not or will not want to go.

God's claim on your person is ultimate, so much so He has made it plain for you to see and understand. But no matter how much evidence there is it is never seen because evidence is not really the issue, your suppression of the truth is.

Jesus knew about your habit to suppress the truth, so he came to seek you out. What evidence do you need? How much is enough? And are you consistent in other areas of life?

Faith in Jesus is a heart issue not an evidence issue, but there is more than enough evidence for those who seek the Truth.
