A NOTE ON TODAY’S LITURGY

In popular usage the day is known as Good Shepherd Sunday, from the 'Shepherd' theme common to both Epistle and Gospel. It is worth recalling that in the first ages of persecution the most common representation of our Lord in Christian art was the figure of the Good Shepherd. The following quotation from a sermon of the great preacher, F. W. Robertson (1816-53), is one of the finest commentaries ever written on this Gospel:

“Beneath the burning skies and the clear starry nights of Palestine there grows up between the shepherd and his flock an union of attachment and tenderness. It is the country where at any moment sheep are liable to be swept away by some mountain-torrent, or carried off by hill-robbers, or torn by wolves. At any moment their protector may have to save them by personal hazard . . . Every hour of the shepherd's life is risk. Sometimes for the sake of an armful of grass in the parched summer days, he must climb precipices almost perpendicular, and stand on a narrow ledge of rock, where the wild goat will scarcely venture. Pitiless showers, driving snows, long hours of thirst—all this he must endure, if the flock is to be kept at all.

And thus there grows up between the man and the dumb creatures he protects, a kind of friendship . . . You love those for whom you risk, and they love you; therefore it is that, not as here where the flock is driven, the shepherd goes before and the sheep follow him. They follow in perfect trust, even though he should be leading them away from a green pasture, by a rocky road, to another pasture they cannot yet see . . . Hirelings are shepherds, but not good shepherds . . . they are tested by danger . . . Now a man is a hireling when he does his duty for pay. He may do it in his way faithfully. The paid shepherd would not desert the sheep for a shower or a cold night. But the lion and the bear—he is not paid to risk his life against them, and the sheep are not his, so he leaves them to their fate . . . The cause of the sheep is not his cause.”
