Frustration

Most of us have experienced frustration when it comes to personal issues. But what do we do when we are frustrated and the roadblock comes from God Himself? Sometimes God uses frustration to get our attention. It can help us think about things we wouldn't otherwise consider and perhaps redirect our path toward something new or different. So when you are bothered by feelings of anxiety or restlessness, don't rush to bury or escape them. Instead, consider them internal signals, as if your conscience is saying, "It's time to turn inward, listen, and process your feelings."

Rest assured, if these stirrings are from God, they will not go away, and when they recur, we need to give Him our undivided attention. We will begin to see that He loves us enough to send something very specific to set us on a new path with Him.

It is an honor to have our sovereign Creator invested in our personal life—so invested, in fact, that He may frustrate us in order to show us a better way. At the end of the day, it's all because of His great love and His commitment to conform us to the image of His Son.
