Fifth Sunday of Lent – April 3rd 2022

The Gospel today is usually known as the Woman caught in Adultery, but I think we should increasingly judge that as an unfair title. She is the poor soul who has been caught up in a game of Jesus's opponents. I think I would rather say that it is a Gospel about Jesus's concern to find ways for everyone to grow in wholeness and holiness - no matter how complicated their situation may be.

The church is known for having a clear and developed teaching on the moral life – of what is right and good in general. It is part of what God has revealed to us to help us grow in holiness and share more fully in his life. This teaching, the moral law, should inform our consciences: our sense and judgement about what is right and wrong. But human situations and the variety of human weakness (and strength) means that how we apply them in our lives may not be simply a matter of doing exactly what they say. Sometimes this may be because of competing obligations, and often because we cannot change everything at once. Catholic teaching also includes the principles and practice of discernment and accompaniment – ways of walking alongside to discover what God's call to grow in holiness means for me now. These are often forgotten when the headlines read – “the church says that doing X is wrong”, but they are what is seen in Jesus's treatment of the woman of today's Gospel and experienced in the confessional and in spiritual direction. Two passages from Pope Francis's The Joy of Love exemplify this approach.

'There are two ways of thinking which recur throughout the Church's history: casting off and reinstating. The Church's way, from the time of the Council of Jerusalem, has always been the way of Jesus, the way of mercy and reinstatement... The way of the Church is not to condemn anyone for ever; it is to pour out the balm of God's mercy on all those who ask for it with a sincere heart... For true charity is always unmerited, unconditional and gratuitous". Consequently, there is a need "to avoid judgements which do not take into account the complexity of various situations" and "to be attentive, by necessity, to how people experience distress because of their condition".'

'It is reductive simply to consider whether or not an individual's actions correspond to a general law or rule, because that is not enough to discern and ensure full fidelity to God in the concrete life of a human being. I earnestly ask that we always recall a teaching of Saint Thomas Aquinas and learn to incorporate it in our pastoral discernment: "Although there is necessity in the general principles, the more we descend to matters of detail, the more frequently we encounter defects... In matters of action, truth or practical rectitude is not the same for all, as to matters of detail, but only as to the general principles... The principle will be found to fail, according as we descend further into detail". It is true that general rules set forth a good which can never be disregarded or neglected, but in their formulation they cannot provide absolutely for all particular situations. At the same time, it must be said that, precisely for that reason, what is part of a practical discernment in particular circumstances cannot be elevated to the level of a rule.'

(Amoris Laetitia, 296 & 304)
