Servant Thoughts

Sometimes current events can overwhelm us. How do we respond? What do we do, especially when something tragic happens but it seems worlds away and yet so close to home? I'm a little hesitant to write an article solely based on the tragic death of elementary school students and their teachers in Texas because at this point little is known about why or what circumstances led to this great tragedy. And on a similar level of concern, is the ongoing war in Ukraine which may be less noticeable in the news but is still seeing daily the slaughter of hundreds and the concern of how an aggressive and unjust invasion may still potentially lead to a greater war with greater implications for all of Europe and possibly even the United States. These are just two tragic events, I am sure there are many more on local, state and national levels that point us to that ultimate question of what do we do? How do we respond?

Today as I write this article it is Ascension Day, which we will be celebrating with a worship service this evening with other congregations in our circuit. What is important about this day is that it is a reminder to us that Jesus sits on the throne. The Lord is in control. That should bring us some comfort... some assurance, that despite appearances, the world isn't going to hell in a handbasket. That phrase which arose out of the Civil War in the 1860s certainly seems appropriate at times, but as we've been learning in our Adult Bible Study class on Revelation, (which is taking a break during the summer- but join us for the intergenerational study "Not So Familiar Bible Stories"), God's people can always take comfort in the truth that God is in control, that His purposes will be accomplished, that the Christian Church will be preserved and that one day we will be with Him.

So what to do in the meantime...

1. Pray! Seems a simple thing to say, but now more than ever, prayers are needed in all situations!
  2. Read! Stay in the Word of God, not only to find passages of hope and comfort, but to stay strong and hold to the truth!
  3. Love your neighbor! There are countless passages in the Scriptures like Micah 6:8 that spell out this truth in other ways, but simply, in a world of hate and sin, we need to love like Jesus loved us!
  4. Trust! Trust in the Lord, His presence, plans and that He will fulfill His purposes!
- In the service and love of Jesus,

Pastor Rob
