I heard there is a Happy National Squirrel Appreciation Day January 21st. Have you hugged a squirrel lately? Those of us living where there is snow on the ground know that a squirrel can dig down two feet in the snow just to find a cold meal.

Here in Bolivia the heat feels good but you can have the humidity.

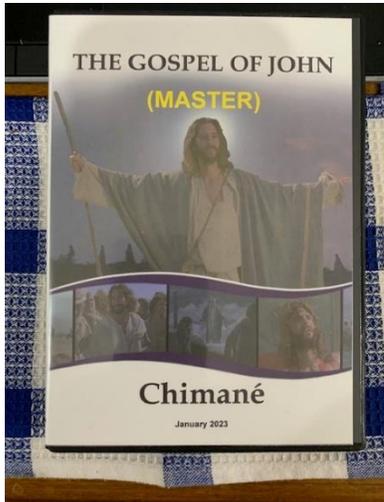

My room would not pass inspection these days. I even had a very strange snake going across the floor the other night after I unpacked the boxes of radios. I wonder how long it was in there.

I am busy charging radios, loading flash drives and preparing all this to ship out soon to the different areas. We came across this model of radio which is a step up from the last model that we can no longer purchase. Solar is the way to go in these devices. It also charges cellphones!

We finished the video “The Gospel of John” for the Chimane people. We are excited to get this video to them. If you would like to take a look at it you can find it on YouTube.

We thank JAARS for their quick work to get this to us before we left last week for Bolivia.

Thanks for your prayers for this outreach. We are pressing forward getting the spoken Word out to the isolated people groups.
